12 HONOR ROLL OF DONORS

Dear Friends of the Reid Health Foundation,

Friends,

You may have noticed changes to some of our facilities around town and we are excited for what the future holds for our community. Specifically, Reid Health is planning to open its new PACE Center – Programs of All-Inclusive Care for the Elderly, a Medicare-Medicaid center in the space formerly occupied by County Market. This is in response to a growing need to provide a coordinated care option for community members who otherwise might require going to a nursing home or other care facility.

We believe that by investing in our community and responding to the health needs of all residents, we can thrive here at home. You'll see this in the current issue of Mission Report when you read April's story of faith and hope.

As we look forward to 2020, we are renewing our commitment to providing the best healthcare in East Central Indiana. I'm fortunate to live in a philanthropic community such as this one and I continued to be inspired by our employees, patients, donors and community partners such as you.

Grateful to Serve,
Robin Henry

HEALING JOURNEY:

'I never dreamed I would get breast cancer'

April Scott will never forget Christmas 2018 -- or her birthday four months later.

She learned the Friday before Christmas she had breast cancer. The news started a whirlwind of doctor's appointments, consultations and surgical procedures that culminated with breast reconstruction surgery on her 46th birthday in April.

"I never dreamed I would get breast cancer," Scott says, looking back over a hectic time that is only today beginning to settle down to what her life was before the diagnosis. So many things come with the shock of being told you have cancer. It felt like a dream. How would her daughters react? How could she keep them from being overwhelmed? "Obviously finding out their mom had cancer would be very upsetting."

The diagnosis filtered through a fog of shock and racing thoughts. "You hear what they are saying," she recalls. "It just sounds muffled." She had to absorb the news with her husband, Adam. To this day, she doesn't totally understand the strength she found in the process.

"I think for me it was faith over fear," she recalls. Her faith had built her strength, though it took time. "If this had happened in my early 30s, I would have responded a whole different way." She had to think of her daughters -- who were 13 and 16 at the time. "I feel like the peace I had and my attitude tremendously helped with their coping -- not only them, but my husband too."

She had already viewed her position as a pharmacist as a form of ministry, dealing with people who include those getting medicines for serious diseases, including cancer. "The worry and anxiety doesn't help the situation. I honestly think that for whatever reason this happened to me, God equipped me to have peace about it and I was able to use this in a positive way. I feel like people sometimes think if you get a cancer diagnosis, you are supposed to mope around and act like your life is over. But that's not me."

Because she has dense breast tissue, she believes her choice of 3D technology for her annual mammogram was critical to her successful healing journey. The mammogram found a lump that was too small for her or her physician to feel, and likely would not have been visible in traditional mammography. Had the lump not been found, her options would have been much more challenging should another year have gone by.

3D technology is ideal for women with dense breast tissue for just that reason. "The earlier we can detect a cancer, the better chance a woman has for survival," says Beth Ingram, M.D., radiologist. Early detection can also simplify the treatment process. She says "breast tomosynthesis," or 3D mammography, has been offered by Reid Health Breast Center for five years.

Her doctor, Tina Reichley, M.D., recommended Scott use this technology a few years ago. Dr. Reichley says she encourages her patients to have an annual screening starting at age 40 -- especially in women who have been on artificial hormones or who have dense breast tissue as did Scott. "I strongly recommend the tomosynthesis mammogram; it is the best when we are talking about dense breast tissue."

Scott, who is a Pharmacist at Reid Health, had the 3D mammogram on Dec. 12, and the suspicious lump was spotted by technology. She counseled with an oncology navigator and was referred to surgeon Thomas Grayson, M.D., seeing him just two days later. A biopsy was quickly performed and two days later Dr. Grayson saw her again to break the news. It was definitely cancer and a form that was aggressive.

After hearing the options for treatment, she knew almost immediately she wanted a double mastectomy. This option reduced the possibility of a need for other treatments like chemotherapy or radiation or a recurrence in the second breast.

Dr. Grayson says a patient's options are of course directly related to what can be learned in the initial evaluation, noting their effectiveness is generally the same. That at least gives a woman facing a breast cancer diagnosis some control over next steps.

"With breast cancer, there are four main tools we use," Dr. Grayson explains. "Different patients may need different combinations of those. Some may need one, some may need all four." The options include surgery, radiation treatment, chemotherapy and hormone manipulation. The treatment options can be confusing for patients, he says.

Each operation has advantages and disadvantages, Dr. Grayson notes. A lumpectomy has cosmetic advantages because it preserves some of the breast tissue. "And the operation is a little bit smaller than a mastectomy." A disadvantage is it almost always would be followed by radiation treatment – and there is always a risk of needing to go back in to remove more tissue.

For most patients, the first option is surgery – either lumpectomy or mastectomy. The exception would be if the initial diagnosis found extensive or advanced disease, which would likely require initial chemotherapy before any other options were considered. For Scott, all options were on the table. She did not hesitate – she chose a double mastectomy and breast reconstruction.

"I just knew I didn't want radiation." So her treatment process involved Travis (Shawn) Greathouse, M.D., plastic and reconstructive surgeon, along with Dr. Grayson. She saw each of them several times ahead of her procedures. She had her first major surgery Jan. 16 to remove her breasts and three lymph nodes, with both physicians involved.

Dr. Greathouse says general surgeons and plastic surgeons commonly collaborate like this. "I can begin the reconstruction before the patient wakes up. This means the patient can wake up and still feel partially whole. It has been shown that 'immediate reconstruction' versus 'delayed reconstruction' has a positive effect on final aesthetic outcomes, improved psychosocial well-being for the post-mastectomy patient, and lower overall costs."

The process was completed on her 46th birthday in April with the completion of breast reconstruction. As she continues her healing, her message, particularly for women with dense breast tissue, is simple: Never skip the annual screening mammogram; and choose 3-D if it's an option.

"Don't take the wait and see approach. Don't decide to skip a mammogram. Timing was key to my path including not having to have chemotherapy.” She finds herself frustrated by friends and acquaintances who avoid their annual screening out of fear of something being found. With breast cancer, as with any cancer, early diagnosis can be the difference in the severity of the treatment process – and life or death.

“My outcome was good,” Scott says. “Had I skipped my annual screening, that may not have been the case. I encourage women to resist any temptation to delay or skip their mammogram. Don’t just think about yourself – think about the people who love you. And do it for them.”

Dr. Grayson also emphasizes what he says is a misconception concerning the question of family history and breast cancer that may cause a false sense of security. While having close relatives who have had breast cancer is a risk factor, not having a family history doesn’t necessarily reduce risk. Scott’s family had no history.

His point: Women who don’t have a family history should never use that as a reason to delay a mammogram. “Family history has nothing to do with more than 90 percent of breast cancers,” he says. “The main risk factor is being a woman. The other most common risk factor is age.”

Choosing 3D Mammography

This procedure is covered by Medicare but may not be covered by commercial insurance. The option is discussed with each patient. The test has some physical limitations, including requiring the patient is able to stand independently for a specific length of time. Please discuss your options with the technologist. To schedule a screening mammogram, call (765) 983-3358.

ReidRIDE

ReidRide 2019 - July 13th
Participants – 320

The summer of 2019 has come and gone and with it another ReidRide has taken place. The 11th year of ReidRide began as a beautiful July morning with mild temperatures. As participants and volunteers arrived to the Reid Health campus they were greeted with the familiar huge white tent that holds registration, water bottle pick up, massages, and snacks for riders and their families. This year they were also welcomed by the smell of a warm breakfast being grilled by the staff of Reid Health Food and Nutrition. Sponsors set up to share their messages, give away freebies, and Cycling Fitness Warehouse inflated tires and checked bikes for riders.

Not only was breakfast a new addition this year, riders also had the option to take the usual 26 mile route or a new, more family friendly 14 mile route. The 26 mile ride took riders onto the Cardinal Greenway and sent them north to Williamsburg, east through Fountain City, then south back to Industries Road, and finally after conquering the hill to Reid Health campus. About the 14 mile route, Reid Health Foundation Director Justin Burkhardt said, "We really wanted to give a better option for families and those individuals who wanted to participate but were maybe apprehensive of the 26 mile route." The shorter route took riders to the Cardinal Greenway but for a shorter distance before returning to the Reid Health Campus.

The ride was great for all that were involved and, as always, an emphasis is put on health and wellness in Wayne County. While riders enjoy the wellness aspect of the ride they are truly there for sole reason, to raise money to purchase shoes for kids in need in our service area. The Reid Health Foundation's Shoes for Kids Program was able to donate over 2,000 pairs of shoes so far in 2019. Distributions took place at 4 different locations through Wayne, Union, and Fayette Counties. And the distributions aren't done! The Reid Health Foundation and a team of volunteers will be at the Santa in the Park event in Connersville, Indiana distributing shoes to school age children in need. During last year's Santa in the Park event over 450 pairs were distributed. Justin Burkhardt shared, "It was confirmation that this program is making a difference beyond Wayne County." "It was truly our pleasure to introduce our mission and most importantly serve those that attended the event in Connersville."

Being a volunteer at one of these distributions is truly touching in so many ways. There are school aged children from Kindergarten to seniors in high school who are waiting for their chance to be fitted for a new pair of shoes. Some of these children arrive with shoes that are too small, not appropriate for winter, have holes, or are even falling apart. When these kids sit in the chair to be fitted they usually can't keep still, are smiling from ear to ear, and happily chatting about how excited they are. Once a volunteer sizes the child they then retrieve their shoes and a new pair of socks and have the child try them on. For some of the children this is the first time they have ever put on a new pair of shoes. The kids then get to test the shoes out, some will take a couple of steps to insure the right fit, while others will see how fast they can run a few short feet away and back to their chair. If the child wants, and the parents say it is okay, they are able to wear their new shoes right out the door as they leave. The empowerment and self-esteem that you see emanating from these children as they leave is enough to melt your heart.

Every day there are children going to school with shoes that are falling apart, have holes, and are too small. This happens during all seasons. Without the fun of ReidRide, the Shoes for Kids Program, the volunteers who help distribute, and donors like you we would not be able to provide good quality shoes to those in need. Thank you!

For more information on the Shoes for Kids Program and to volunteer, donate, or sponsor ReidRide please contact the Reid Health Foundation by calling at 765-983-3102 or emailing at ReidFoundation@ReidHealth.org

At Reid Health October is known for one thing, BRAvo! The Reid Health Foundation combats breast cancer and promotes awareness by holding the annual BRAvo! – Busting Out Against Breast Cancer signature event. However, it is not just a one night affair, BRAvo! is all month long!

In August, bra decoration begins. If you've never heard of BRAvo! this may sound like an odd statement. However, the decorated bras are used throughout the entire event! Bras have been decorated in memory of a loved one, in honor of someone currently fighting, or just for the fun of it. Each bra has its own meaning and own theme. This year the Reid Foundation received 42 bras ranging from Hakunana Your Tata... It's a Problem Free Mammography (a play on the Lion King song) created by Summer Culbertson, Kim McCurdy, and Sherry Dillon, to "Don't Put Boobie in the Corner" (a homage to the movie Dirty Dancing) created by Rebekah Miller, and Maleficent created by Shannon Quinanes and Zoe McIntosh.

The bras arrived at the Reid Health Foundation office, were photographed, and then sent out into the community in the middle of September. The bras were on display at about 30 locations within the Reid service area. While on display the bras are voted on, on the Reid BRAvo! website. This year there was a total of 255,807 votes cast in the three weeks bras were on display. Once voting has ended, bras are then brought back to the Reid Health campus where they are paired with auction items. These items are then sold at the BRAvo! Signature Event which took place on October 26th.

In 2019 the Reid Foundation was happy to pair with Centerville High School and Indiana University East volleyball for their annual Pink Out games. During these games breast cancer ribbons and preventative information is passed out by volunteers. At IUE patrons received free admission and a t-shirt but many chose to make a donation to BRAvo! to support the cause. At Centerville they had their annual pumpkin decorating auction. Girls on the team decorate pumpkins which are then auctioned off during the game. The girls then donate their proceeds to BRAvo!

Guests of the BRAvo! Signature Event were invited to the second floor of the outpatient care center which had been turned into a cocktail party comprised of music, a photo booth, silent auction items, hors d'oeuvres, and the bra gallery. Once the silent auction had ended guests proceeded to Lingle Grand Hall for dinner and the live auction. This year's event was in honor of April Scott. April is a pharmacist at Reid Health who was diagnosed with breast cancer the Friday before Christmas of 2018. She is a survivor, and along with a table full of her loved ones, and was recognized with a standing ovation at the event presentation. April continues to push women to get their mammograms, without delay.

Chad Bolser once again took the stage as MC of the event. Many laughs followed as Bolser entertained the crowd and sold items like a trip to the Ellen show donated by Cox Media, a Kent's Harbor and Sagamore Resort Package donated by West End Bank and Robin Henry, a beautiful green mystic quartz set with matching earrings, necklace, and a bangle bracelet donated by Hoppe Jewelers, and a week's stay at the home of Dr. Joseph & Mrs. Jules Clemente.

To-date BRAvo! has continued to raise funds to support mammograms for those in need in our service area. The BRAvo! mammogram even covers Reid's 3D mammography. This 3D technology allows doctors to see more during a scan. This ability to see a more detailed picture of the tissue sometimes can lessen the need for a biopsy or additional testing.

If you or someone you know is in need of a mammogram, has no insurance, or is underinsured all they need to do is call (765) 983-3358 and tell the operator they need a BRAvo! mammogram. It is truly that simple.
